HOW TO Read & Write Chess

There are many different ways to write chess moves. The most popular method (described below) is called algebraic notation:

Each square has a name, taken from the intersection of the file (vertical or upand-down rows of squares, which are lettered) and rank (horizontal or side-byside rows of squares, which are numbered) the square is on. In the diagram the square on the intersection of the 7th rank and the d-file is called d7. Like in battleship!

The pieces are abbreviated a b c d e f g h by a capital letter, like this:

K: King; Q: Queen; R: Rook; B: Bishop; N: Knight.

Notice that the Knight is N, since K is reserved for the King. Notice also that pawns have no abbreviation.

A move is written by using the abbreviation for the piece that moves, followed by the square the piece moves to (1. ... Nf6). A pawn move is written as the square the pawn has moved to (1. d4). A capture by a piece is written as the abbreviation for the piece that moved, followed by an x, and finally the square the capture takes place on (8. Bxe5). A pawn capture is written as the file the capturing pawn stands on, followed by an x, and finally the square the capture takes place on (3. dxe5).

Other moves are castling kingside, 7 which is written 0-0, and castling queenside, which is written 0-0-0. An en passant capture is indicated by e.p. after the amove, and pawn promotion is indicated by adding () and the abbreviation for the piece the pawn promotes to. Ambiguous moves (where more than one piece or pawn can move to the destination square) are taken care of 8 by putting an extra rank or file in to make 7 it clear which piece or pawn moved.

Here is a sample, using the famous 5 smothered mate trap from the 4 Budapest Defense. 3

THE SECRET WORD

Winston Chen will never win the Minnesota second grade championship. In 2008 he won the first grade championship. And then the seven year old skipped a grade! Did that stop Winston? Not at all. This year he was the state third grade cochampion!

And he can obviously read, along with the rest of you who answered last issue's "Find the Secret Word" contest. Page 6 was the key and the correct answer was four. The word "hopeless" appeared four times in the February 2009 issue. My faithful gnomes from Outer Mongolia (okay, it's really my sister's second grade class) has chosen and Winston will receive a copy of Looking for Trouble by Dan Heisman.

ON THE COVER

Thanks to photographer and chess teacher Herbert Valdsaar, we have a record of Basil's debut against ten-year-old Hannah of Florida. Basil is a two-year-old Cavalier King Charles spaniel. Rumor has it he is partial to playing the King's Gambit.

Both are home schooled, but Hannah has an advantage: her sister and two brothers also play chess, and she gets help from Jonathan Corbblah, a senior chess instructor for USA Chess camps (www.usachess.com). And she has the right attitude. "When you make a mistake, you learn from it, and you can try something different next time."

Be sure to check out the chess camp listings on pages 10-11. There might be one near you!

ERRATA

My gnomes found a mistake on page 11 of the February 2009 issue. WHITE resigned, not BLACK. Our apologies to young Mr. Lohr.

TALES OF THE Arabian KNIGHTS

BY RICK KENNEDY Illustrations by Pamela Key

Comes Into

Do you have another tale for me, the King asked.

"I do," she said, modestly. "It came back to me when you told of your own adventure."

And she began...

The young Prince rode with his advisors to all the ends of his father's kingdom. He was a bright, young man, and he wished to learn all that he could of the world around him.

On one such outing, the Prince arrived at a hard-scrapple land, too arid to allow for much grazing of flocks, and barely able to provide feed for the rare animal that could be caught sight of. The nearby water was brackish, and the inhabitants, as far as the prince could tell, were a proud but rude folk.

Yet he was astonished, upon greeting the local ruler and completing formal introductions, to be immediately challenged to a chess game. A board was found, the pieces set, and with the presentation of an oddly adorned medallion, the game began.

Handing the jewelry to one of his party, the Prince asked them for a translation of the inscription.

The game began, and the Prince met immediate success. His forces on the board were dominating those of his opponent.

"Excuse me, Your Majesty," an aide whispered, "but our first guess is that the words on the medallion say 'Upon checkmate, the victor comes into the soils of the land'. That seems a good omen for your play, today—to win the game, and receive the land as your reward."

The Prince nodded, and continued to press forward with his pieces. Soon he had swept away all but one of Black's pawns and his lone king.

"A thousand apologies, Your Majesty," came a hurried, muffled gasp at the Prince's shoulder. "We are now sure that the words of the inscription say this: 'Upset the King, and the victor of the game will be buried in the soil.' It appears to be a death threat, Your Majesty."

The Prince looked at the board. How awkward, he thought.

"I must lose this position?" he asked himself. "Oh, well, then I must."

1.Rbc6 Ke8 2.Rd4 Kf8 3.Re6 Kg8 4.Rf4 Kh8 5.Qa8+ Kg7

The Prince's plan was to avoid the many checkmates that beckoned to him.

6.Ne2 Kh7 7.Ng3 Kg7 8.Bd3 Kh7

One slip was all that the Prince needed to seal the fate of the black king—and his own. Careful, careful, careful.

9.Kh4 Kg7 10.Re7+ Kh6 11.a3 g5 checkmate

"A brilliant game," the Prince said, nodding his head to his opponent. "A thousand gracious thanks for the opportunity to match wits with and lose to you—and now my party and I must be off."

Never before had the Prince been happier to suffer defeat in a game of chess. He promised himself that this was a lesson that he would never forget.

She smiled. "And you have not forgotten, have you, Your Majesty?"

"It was many years ago," he said, "but no, I have not forgotten. Thank you for recalling the story."

Grandmaster Larry Evans won the U.S. Championship in 1951, 1952, 1961-62, 1968, and again in 1980!

BEST QUESTION:

COMPUTER STUMPED

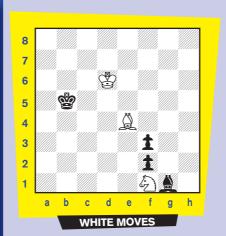

Tantale

In this day and age many people think computers can solve just about any position. But perhaps your readers will be interested in this endgame study composed in 1901 by Alexei Troitsky that computers can't yet solve.

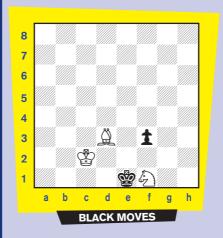

Pretty amazing. Computers today can crack any position with six or less pieces on the board, but this study has nine. Let's follow the instructive solution.

1. Bc8+! Kf4 (if 1...Kxe5 2.Nxf3+ followed by Nxh2 wins) 2. Nf1 Bg1 (no help is 2...Bg3 3. Kh5!) 3. Kg7 Kxe5 4. Kxf7 Kd6 (other tries also lose: for example, 4...Ke4 5. Ke6 Kf4 6. Bd7 Ke4 7. Bc6+ Kf4 8. Kd5 Kg5 9. Ke5 Kg6 10. Be8+ Kg7 11. Ke6 Kf8 12. Bg6 Kg7 13. Kf5 Kf8 14. Kf6 Kg8 15. Bh5 Kh7 16. Bf7 Kh8 17. Kg6 Bh2 18. Nxh2 f1=Q 19. Nxf1 wins) 5. Be6 Kc7 6. Ke7 Kc6 7. Bg8 Kc7 8. Bd5 Kc8 9. Be6+ Kc7 10. Bd7 Kb6 11. Kd6 Kb7 12. Bf5 Kb6 13. Be4 Kb5

White must resist the temptation to grab the pawn which has to stay on the board for now. Black can draw after 14. Bxf3? Kc4 15. Ke5 Kc5 16. Bg2 Kc4. The elegant winning idea is to stalemate Black's king and then gobble the bishop when it goes to h2, leading to a book win.

The right approach is 14. Bd5! Kb6
15. Bc6 Ka5 16. Kc5 Ka6 17. Bd5
Ka7 18. Kc6 Ka6 19. Bc4+ Ka5
20. Bb5 Kb4 21. Kb6 Ka3 22. Kc5
Kb3 23. Bd7 Kc3 24. Bc6 Kb3 25.
Bb5 Kc3 26. Bc4 Kb2 27. Kb4 Kc2
28. Ba6 Kb2 29. Bb5 Kc2 30. Bc4
Kb2 31. Bb3 Ka1 32. Kc3 Kb1 33.
Bc4 Kc1 34. Bd3 Kd1 35. Kb2 Ke1
36. Kc2 Bh2 37. Nxh2 f1=Q 38.
Nxf1 and wins.

The solution stops here because reaching a theoretical win is sufficient in endgame studies. Bishop and knight vs. king is the hardest elementary mate. The winning method is to force the lone king into a corner which is the same color as the bishop (in this case, either h1 or a8) and then administer mate.

Troitsky (1866-1942) is one of the greatest endgame composers. For more of his work see 360 Brilliant and Instructive End Games (Dover Publications, 1968).

Announcing Check

Doogie

I have a question about the rules for check and checkmate. I've been playing chess with my kids (seven and 11) for the last few weeks and I want to make sure they (and I) play correctly. A few times I overlooked that my king was in check and they also missed it ("check" was never called). When they noticed it on their turn, they took the king and "won the game." Is it required that "check" be called before a king can be taken? And yes, my kids are already better then me at this game.

The rules don't require us to announce check, though it may be helpful to do so in offhand games. The king can never be captured—we must return to the position before it happened and continue the game from that point.

The Chess

Forcing a Back Rank Mate

At one time or another (and probably more often than we care to admit!), we have all allowed a rook or queen to come into our territory and deliver back rank mate.

Here is a sad end to one of my games from my second chess tournament, soon after my tenth birthday.

Sara Ann Johnson (736)

Todd Bardwick (935)

Seeing the opportunity to grab a pawn, I quickly played 32.Rxf5?? Of course, I was shocked when she calmly responded, 32...Re1 mate!

As your chess skills improve, you won't overlook this simple mate as often as you do in the beginning of your chess career.

When you do notice that there is a possible back rank mate, you can't plan on your opponent walking into it, but you can look for ways to make it happen by chasing away your opponent's pieces that defend the key squares.

Here is a position from one of Bobby Fischer's games played in Palma de Mallorca, Spain, in 1970.

Robert Fischer

Samuel Reshevsky

Fischer observed the possibility of a back rank mate and looked for a way to make his dream come true. He played 29...Qd4+ 30.Kh1 30.Rf2 Re1 mate 30...Qf2! 31.Resigns 31.Rxf2 loses to 31...Re1+ 32.Rf1 Rxf1 mate. If White tries either 31.Rg1 or 31.Qb5, Black wins by playing 31...Re1.

Now that you have seen how to force a back rank mate, here is one of the most famous back rank mate positions of all time. This game was said to take place in New Orleans in 1920. Some chess historians are suspicious that this game was actually a forgery. Perhaps it was never played, but it brilliantly shows how to force a back rank mate by chasing away the defenders.

Detective

by NM Todd Bardwick

Carlos Torre-Repetto

Edwin Ziegler Adams

Notice that Black's rook on e8 is attacked twice and defended twice. White dreams that if he can chase away the queen or rook on c8, he could capture the e8-rook, followed by checkmate.

White works on luring away the queen with 18.Qg4! Black can't capture the queen because she has to defend the rook and back rank mate. 18...Qb5 19.Qc4! Again, White safely attacks the unprotected black lady. Neither the rook or queen can take her, because of the attack on e8. 19...Qd7 20.Qc7! Again offering a queen on a square where she can't be captured! 20...Qb5 21.a4! Qxa4 Black's queen must stay in contact with the rook on e8. 22.Re4! Qb5 22...Rxe4 loses to 23.Qxc8+ Re8 24.Rxe8+ Qxe8 25.Qxe8 mate. 22...b6 loses to 23.Qxc8 Rxc8 24.Rxa4. 23.Qxb7! Resigns Black's queen has run out of moves: 23...Qa4 24.Rxa4 or 23...Qxb7 24.Rxe8+ Rxe8 25.Rxe8 mate or 23...Rxe4 24.Qxc8+ mating, like above.

Whenever you observe a potential back rank checkmate by either you or your opponent, be extra careful to make sure the defending pieces can't be chased away to make the mating dream come true.

Attacking

the Castled King

You can't attack without focus.

Luke Skywalker needs R2D2 to tell him where to focus his torpedo when he attacks the Death Star. Even our powerful sun needs a magnifying glass to focus its rays when it attacks a lowly leaf.

In this position, White focuses his attack against Black's kingside. He doesn't decide this just because Black's king is there. Another major factor is that most of Black's pieces aren't. A queenside rook and knight aren't even developed, while the centralized knight and fianchettoed bishop, normally considered well-placed pieces, can't defend the kingside either. Meanwhile, White's bishops rake the kingside from the alternate wing; one knight is already there while the other transports easily through e4.

The reason for this is White's pawn chain in the center. Control of the center signals an attack on the flank, because White's pieces can get from one side of the board to the other more easily than his opponent's.

The first step in attacking the castled king is to make the opposition move his wall of pawns from its protection. Right now, Black's pawns on f7, g7 and h7 cover every square on the sixth rank; a white knight can't even check without being captured. If White can get Black to move one of them, penetrating will be easier.

As a rule of thumb: Make the defender move two pawns in front of his castled king and you've got him! (But remember to be wary of rules of thumb; chess isn't that easy).

Because of this, 1.Qc2 looks like White's best move. The attack on Black's h-pawn by the queen/bishop battery appears to force the desired pawn move.

If Black plays 1...g6, holes are breached in his pawn wall on f6 and h6, giving White an entry plan like: Qd2, Qh6 and Ng5. The threat of mate on h7 forces ...Bxg5. But then White recaptures with his bishop, chases away Black's queen and pops it into the other hole on f6, mating against the third hole on g7.

The defense 1...h6 is equally instructive. White transfers his queen in front of his bishop with the maneuver Qe2 and Qe4. Then, when Black plays ...g6 to stop the mate on h7, White's bishop munches up the free pawn on h6. Note how badly ...g6 gets clobbered after Black plays ...h6; an excellent illustration of the two-pawn move rule of thumb.

Unfortunately for White, chess isn't all strategy. There's also tactics. Building a battery with the queen on c2 allows Black a knight fork on b4. White saves the bishop by first capturing the pawn on h7 with a check, then retreats his queen back to b1 to keep it defended. But Black, whose fianchettoed bishop was unveiled by his original knight move to b4, uses it to capture the knight on f3, shattering White's kingside when he recaptures with his g-pawn. Black uses this breach by first trapping White's bishop with his pawn to g6, then pinning it to his king along the open g-file (...Rg8) if White captures g6 with his bishop. Black ends up a bishop ahead while White, who sometimes gets compensation in this pattern by opening Black's kingside, gets none this time because his own kingside is worse.

So if White's going to get away with the strategically desirable battery, he better build it with the queen ahead of the bishop, so the knight fork is answered by Qxh7 mate instead of Bxh7 check. This suggests a plan like Bc2 or Bb1 followed by Qd3, but which retreat is better?

This question can be answered strategically instead of tactically, so it's easier. Of course White prefers the bishop on c2 to b1; so the a1 rook gets into the attack faster while the bishop has access to b3 and a4. The only downside to Bc2 is that ... Nb4 forces it back to b1 anyway. So White has to make the strategic decision whether he'd rather have his bishop on b1 with black's knight on d5 or b4. Since b4 is further from the focus of White's attack, his obvious preference is for Black's knight to be on b4.

1.Bc2! Nxc3

Black wants to stop Qd3 with a bishop on a6, but first has to resolve the pressure against d5. An immediate 1...Ba6? 2.Nxd5 exd5 gives him double isolated d-pawns, while 2...Bxf1 3.Nxe7+ Qxe7 4.Qxf1 loses too many pieces for the rook. Speaking of pressure on d5, 1...f5 gets in trouble after 2.exf6 e.p. gxf6 (to keep White's pieces off e5 and g5) 3.Bb3! and 4.d5! after Black moves his knight. A premature demonstration on the flank is refuted by a reaction in the center. Note the advantage of the bishop on c2 over b1 in this example.

2.bxc3 Ba6 3.Re1 Nc6

Foiled in his first attempt to post the queen before his bishop, White now decides to move the knight off f3 so he can replace it with his queen en route to e4. But since his attack is focused on the kingside, White has to figure out a way to move his knight to the right rather than the left.

4.h4! ...

This creates a support point for the knight on g5, right in the heart of the attack. The pawn shouldn't be taken: After 4...Bxh4? 5.Nxh4 Qxh4 6.Re4 followed by 7.Qh5 and 8.Rh4, Black won't survive long enough to queen it in the endgame. Accepting the sacrifice gives White too much time for his rook lift (Re4-h4), a standard attacking motif for bringing heavy artillery into the area of focus.

Aside from that, trading bishop for knight creates its own problems at this point, leaving White with the strategic advantage of the bishop pair. Retaining both bishops against different defensive pieces is often a ferocious offensive weapon, compensating for a pawn toss independently of the rook lift.

But White shouldn't play 4.h4 just because it's bad for Black to capture. Hope Chess, as I call it, backfires against opposition too smart to bite. The move has to be part of a sound strategic plan: The maneuver Of3-e4 requires moving the knight to g5, for which White needs to create a support point with his pawn. Tactics justify strategy, not vice versa. This way, White doesn't care whether Black takes it or not.

But 4.h4 just looks weird, doesn't it? Who makes that kind of move?

It looks weird because White doesn't usually have a central pawn chain justifying the attack. That's why step one is focus. If Black can dissolve the chain, 4.h4 will be as weird as it looks; his queenside pieces able to travel through the center to punish it.

4... d6!

So Black correctly reacts to White's attack on the flank with a break in the center. Now the game becomes a race: White needs to mate before Black dissolves the center to embarrass 4.h4.

5.Ng5 h6

Capturing the knight surrenders the bishop pair without winning a pawn. The alternative 5...g6 allows a couple of demolition sacrifices: 6.Nxh7! Kxh7 7.Qh5+ Kg7 8.Qh6+ Kg8 9.Bxg6! fxg6 10.Qxg6+ Kh8 followed by another rook lift: 11.Re3 & 12.Rg3 and queen mates on either g7 or h6.

Note in this example how, once focused, the queen and knight comprise the infantry of White's attack, sinking themselves into (fox)holes on the front line, while the bishops and rook act like long-range artillery, supporting the troops from a distance while aimed at the focused area. This is normal. Queens and knights usually work best from up close, bishops and rooks best from far away. By first focusing the attack, White knows "up close to what" and "far away from what."

Whenever I ask students for White's best move in this position, they always say Qh5. Why? So the queen can mate on h7 if Black captures the knight.

Hope chess again; tactics directing strategy. How does this move help the queen to h7 if Black doesn't play the response for which White is hoping? This reasoning is better: White's plan is to move his queen to e4 via f3, but he doesn't have time to pursue this strategy if Black's h-pawn is attacking his knight. White's first task, therefore, is to determine whether or not that is true. To accomplish this, White should pretend that he doesn't get a 6th move and calculate the tactics after Black captures the knight in the position above. If he wins the variation, White can play the move that strategy suggests.

6.Qf3!

See the difference? With 6.Qf3, strategy dictates tactics. With 6.Qh5, tactics dictate strategy.

Now White's threat is 7.Qe4 g6 8.Nxe6! fxe6 9.Qxg6+ & 10.Qh7#. Black's f-pawn is overworked because White advanced his knight to the front line (instead of the simpler retreat to d2) back on moves 4 & 5 when he liberated the queen.

6... hxg5?

It's Black's turn to play hope chess: hoping that White recaptures on c6, after which 7...d5! cuts his queen out of the attack.

The best try for Black is 6...d5 right away, keeping White's queen off e4. But that takes the race out of the game by removing the pressure from White's center. White would have all the time in the world to pursue the kingside attack at his leisure.

7.Qh5! g6 8.Bxg6! fxg6 9.Qxg6+ Kh8 10.hxg5 ...

On the one hand, threatening our old friend the rook lift: 11.Re3 & 12.Rh3#. Hard enough to prevent on its own, but a second white threat is 11.Qh6+ Kg8 12.g6, followed by 13.Qh7+ and mate on f7 or h8.

The combined power of both finally puts Black's defense beyond reach.

GEORGIA

Castle Chess Camp: June 14-21, 2009

The Castle Chess Camp is a nationally renowned program of chess instruction, recreation and competition that brings together some of the best chess teachers and scholastic players from across the U.S. The Atlanta camp is now recognized as one of the finest (and strongest) chess camps in the country.

The camp concept was developed out of a five-year study of seventh and eighth grade students by Dr. Robert Ferguson in Pennsylvania. Those students engaged in chess classes showed dramatic improvement in their schoolwork compared with those students who were engaged in other forms of "enrichment activities." These results prompted Dr. Ferguson to form the American Chess School, which held its first resident "Castle" camp in Pennsylvania in 1982.

If you have any questions about the camp, please e-mail Mark@ castlechess.org.

Defending Against the Colle

(and some of his pals)

by Pete Tamburro

We've talked about using the All-Purpose Defense of C.J.S. Purdy to defend against the Colle. You might remember that normal developing moves were used, but it was a tough game for Black if he made one mistake!

This time out we're going to give you a defense to fight with! Not only that, but we're going to take care of some of Colle's buddies.

Before we start, we have to say something about the opening books that go for about $25 that show you an opening system using one of the openings below. Too many of these books seem to promise White a sure-fire attack against the black defense with a bunch of moves that seem to work against anything.

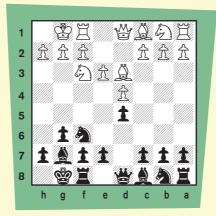

There are two things that bother me about this, and it's been going on for a half-century or so. First, they rarely give the best defense. After all, would you buy the book if it said you were going to draw instead of win? Secondly, it doesn't teach you how to play chess. Usually, you get a very narrow choice of moves and a very narrow plan. That's not a lot to grow with.

So why do people play this stuff? Well, it works! And it works especially well in scholastic chess because most players playing black don't know how to defend against these attacks.

Not to worry, because you are going to learn how to meet these attacks right now!

1.d4 Nf6 2.Nf3 d5 3.e3 g6 4.Bd3 Bg7 5.0-0 0-0

Diagram A

As you can see, this is quite different from Black's e6, d5, c5 pawn formation. Many players prefer this pawn formation because the Colle bishop on d3 isn't directly attacking h7. The g6-pawn is in the way. Also, at some point, the fianchettoed bishop on g7 will help with Black playing the counter attack with e5.

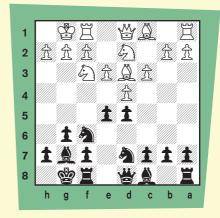

Let's see what Black can do if White continues with the Colle set-up.

6.c3 Nbd7

Black plays the knight to d7 instead of c6 because it gives the defense more choices. With the knight on d7, Black can play either 7...e5 or 7...c5. The e5 move is very safe and leads to an equal position with no problems. The c5 move is a try at winning and has more risk to it. We'll look at both.

The Safe Way 7.Nbd2

Diagram B

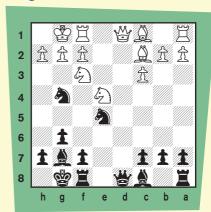

7. ... e5!

Pretty cool! The Colle is supposed to get the big e-pawn move in, and here Black does it! White can't hold onto the pawn either. If 8.Nxe5 Nxe5 9.dxe5 Ng4 10.f4 Nxe3 and Black has a big edge. So ...

8.dxe5 Ng4 9.e4 Ndxe5 10.Bc2 dxe4 11.Nxe4

Diagram C

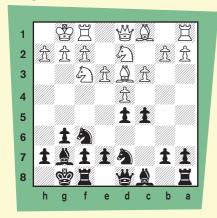

The position is equal and safe for Black. It will be hard for either side to play for a win. However, Black can play for a win with ...c5. Let's look.

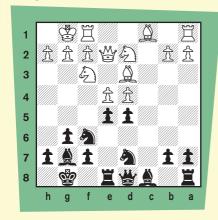

Playing for a win! (from Diagram B)

7. ... c5

Diagram D

8.Qe2 Re8 9.e4 cxd4 10.cxd4 e5 Diagram E

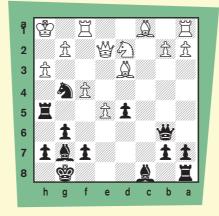

See how much has happened in three moves! White has gone ahead with his plan to push for e4 by putting his queen on e2. Black puts his rook opposite the white queen, a good tip! Then, as soon as White plays e4, Black captures on d4 and counters with ...e5. This is a great position to try for a win!

If White still thinks he has an attack, he is quickly shown that isn't the case:

11.dxe5 Nxe5 12.Nxe5 Rxe5 13.f4 Rh5 14.e5 (14.f5 dxe4 15.Nxe4 Bxf5 16.Nxf6+ Qxf6 17.Bxf5 Rxf5) 14...Ng4 15.h3 Qb6+ 16.Kh1

Diagram F

Black to play has about twelve good moves here! His pieces are active and his undeveloped ones will be in the game before White's undeveloped pieces. If you want safety, go for the first line with ...e5. If you want to go for more, use the ...c5 line.

Colle's Pal, Barry

Something called the Barry Attack has attracted a lot of attention in recent years as a few English players have scored some pretty quick wins with it. There are several books that deal with it. We are not afraid of it because we know how to play good developing moves! We will be active. We will refuse to just sit there and wait for the attack. That's a good way to lose.

After 1.d4 Nf6 2.Nf3 d5, White doesn't have to play 3.e3 to go into the Colle System. Instead, he may try the Barry Attack with 3.Nc3 g6 4.Bf4 Bg7 5.Qd2 0-0

Diagram G

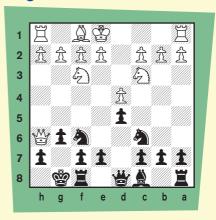

Well, at least White isn't being sneaky about his plans. He's lined up the queen and bishop to head for h6 to try and exchange off the dark squared bishop and play h4 and h5 to hit g6 (he'll be castling queenside) and even get Ng5 in for a mating attack.

We've noticed that many players get scared about the bishop trade because the queen recapturing on h6 looks scary. Be careful, yes; but, scared, no! Look what Black can do:

6.Bh6 Bxh6 7.Qxh6 Nc6

Diagram H

Now White has two paths to try and Black will be ready for both.

Beating the All-Out Attack

Yes, it's dangerous! You have to keep a cool head. Play through the main line here and you'll see it's the same idea: develop your pieces and be active with them. You also have to know traps you can fall into. Look at the 9...Nxh5 line and see how you can get mated by move 14! Chess isn't easy, but it does reward students who study!

8.h4 Bf5 9.h5 Nb4 (9...Nxh5 10.Ng5 Nf6 11.Nxh7 Nh5 12.Ng5 Re8 13.Qh7+ Kf8 14.Qxf7#) 10.Rc1 Nxc2+ 11.Kd2 Ng4 12.Qf4 Nb4 13.Ne5 (13.hxg6 fxg6) 13...Nxe5 14.Qxe5 f6 15.Qf4 e5 16.dxe5 d4

Diagram I

And the hunter becomes the hunted! White can be more solid with 8.e3 Bf5 9.0-0-0 Ng4 10.Qh4 e5 11.Qg3 exd4 12.exd4 Nf6, but Black is just as developed as White and has just as much a chance of attacking Black's queen as White has in attacking Black's monarch.

A Really Wrong-Headed Idea!

There is a book (and even a website) on an old line called the Colle-Zukertort (C-Z) System. Some scholastic players may not notice the difference the fianchetto makes against the queenside fianchetto by White, which is more effective against the e6, d5, c5 defense set-up. You can't just memorize moves. You have to understand ideas!

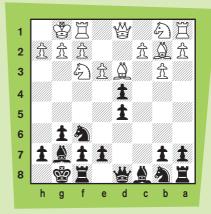

The C-Z is the Colle without c3. Instead, White plays b3 and Bb2 along with Ne5 and even f4 for a big time attack on the kingside. However, if we use our fianchetto formation, we have little to worry about.

After 1.d4 Nf6 2.Nf3 d5 3.e3 g6 4.Bd3 Bg7 5.0-0 0-0, White can decide to play a C-Z set-up instead of playing 6.c3 and play 6.b3, but 6.b3 c5 7.Bb2.

Here is where playing a system against the wrong formation can hurt. If White tries a Colle-like trick with 7.dxc5 Nfd7! gives Black a great game. If he tries 7.Ba3 (a C-Z type trick) 7...cxd4 8.exd4 Nc6 9.Qe2 Ne4.

7...cxd4!

The pawn exchange is a great idea!

Boola, Boola! Do YOU Google?

[Dr. Root put together a few facts about college chess for the February 2009 issue, but we ran out of pages and couldn't use it then. Even though the SuperNationals will be over by the time you read this, it's a "good read." I've left some of her facts blank. It will be your job, should you accept the challenge, to find the answers and fill in the blanks. Google, use your favorite search engine, or your coaches and parents—anything that works!

The winning entry—chosen by my faithful gnomes from Outer Mongolia—will receive a copy of the latest edition of Modern Chess Openings, edited by GM Nick de Firmian. Send your entries to: gpetersen@uschess.org. or USCF, 44-D Manchester Court, Freehold, NJ 07728. Good luck!]

Top Ten Facts about College Chess

Why? It gives Black three choices, most bad. Two are not good and one is OK. If 8.Bxd4 Nc6 (hitting the bishop) 9.Bb2 Qc7 (putting a major piece on the c-file and supporting an eventual ...e5) 10.Nbd2 e5! and Black has a fine center and development. If 8.Nxd4, Black gets 8...e5 right away. So

8. The Pan-American Intercollegiate Team Championship began in 1945, when many college chess players returned from fighting in World War II. The tournament is held every year between Christmas and New Year's Day.

Which school won in 2008? Who won the most times?

- 7. Just like for college basketball, there is a Final Four of college chess every spring.
- 6. You can learn chess from college students volunteering in K-12 schools. And lots of college campuses host summer chess camps for children.
- 5. Chess players of all levels (beginners through grandmasters) attend college chess clubs.

- 4. Before he became a grandmaster, Hikaru Nakamura was awarded a college scholarship for winning the National Elementary.
- 3. Cheerleaders and mascots cheer for college chessplayers.
- 2. When you become a high school junior, you can apply for a college chess scholarship at over 30 colleges and universities across the U.S. See http://main.uschess.org/content/view/816 4/131/ for more information.
- 1. You can win college chess scholarships this year at many tournaments, including at SuperNationals.

Here we have a perfect position to understand what it means to be active. White's bishops are misplaced and have little room to move. The pawns are known as "hanging pawns." They cause problems if one moves because Black can use the square next to the advanced pawn for a piece that can't be attacked by other pawns. Also, in this position, the d-pawn is pinned because of Black's fianchettoed bishop, the force of which White didn't consider when mindlessly playing b3 and Bb2.

And look at that attack on d4! The black queen, rook, queen knight and king bishop are all attacking it. Even the king knight has a path to join the fun with ...Nh6 and ...Nf5.

You will no doubt have to meet one of these openings, and probably all of them. It's good to play through all the lines and get a feel for "active" play. You will also notice that key pawn moves like ...c5 and ...e5 come in a lot. The queen ends up on c7 or b6. The knights go to d7 or c6 on the queenside or f6 and g4 on the kingside. The rooks are really useful on the e- and d- files. The queen bishop usually has to wait to find its best spot and the king bishop of course goes to g7. As for the pawns, try to keep it to e5, c5 and g6. Your other moves are for the pieces!

Get developed! Fight it out in the center! As long as you're developing properly, there is no reason any of these attacks should work. GM Walter Browne once said that a strong player was an A-player with no fear. That works at every level! Have no fear!
